Review & Outlook of Market Performance

The local bourse started the week in a flat tone amid a lack of clear direction. However, market sentiment has been buoyant since mid-week on the back of surges in the global markets as investors bet on an interest-rate cut by the US Fed next week. Mainly boosted by the strong performances of property counters amid the rate-cut expectation, the Hang Seng Index marched to all-time highs in three consecutive trading days to close the week at 24,898.11, up 915.50 points or 3.8% w-o-w. Trading remained hectic this week, with average daily turnover amounted to HK$100.2 billion.

Earlier in the week, market focus was on HKEx, which soared after the HKSAR government said it had raised its shareholding in the bourse operator to 5.88% last Friday. Local property counters picked up steam from midweek amid growing confidence for a US rate cut next week while the upcoming public land auction also attracted investors' attention on the sector. The HS Properties Sub-index shot up 12.3% w-o-w, with a few bluechip property developers surging to new record highs on Friday.

The mainland on Tuesday released its latest inflation data, with August's consumer price index up 6.5% y-o-y the highest since December 2006 - driven by surging food prices. The higher inflationary pressure further signalled that the central government would respond with decisive tightening measures. Meanwhile, A-share listing continued to be the main theme for select H shares, whereas concerns over possible further austerity measures somewhat weighed on the overall sentiment towards H shares. Indeed, the PBOC after Friday's market close raised both the benchmark 1-year deposit rate and lending rate by 27 bps, effective 15th September 2007. Underperforming the HSI, the HSCEI ended this week at 14,707.90, up 1.5% w-o-w.

Looking forward, market spotlight should fall on the interest-rate decision in the FOMC meeting next Tuesday. Although a meaningful profit-taking in the local stock market may be imminent after this week's rally, any consolidation should be short-lived on the back of strong liquidity on continual QDII inflows and the upcoming "individual through train" programme.
